Pennsylvania American Water announced Wednesday it had given a grant to the Pittsburgh Botanic Garden to help clean up a site in Collier Township.

The grant was part of $35,000 given to seven organizations in Pennsylvania, Pennsylvania American Water said.

According to the release: The garden "will use the funding to clean up a 40-acre site in the Chartiers Creek watershed in Collier Township by removing debris and invasive species and by planting trees, shrubs and other native plants to restore the habitat and foster animal/plant diversity."

The grant will also help restore native aquatic species following a remediation in wetlands including Pinkerton Run.
